

I will talk about my preliminary analysis in trying to estimate demand for groundwater as an input in irrigation. Using the estimated elasticity of demand for groundwater, I will talk about implications on reforming water prices as a policy instrument to induce water users' incentive to conserve water.